

Designing T-Shirts with AI Images

As a summer special event, Princeton ACM and IEEE Computer Society is sponsoring a “hands-on” event featuring the design of T-shirts using AI-generated images.

Our presenter will be the artist Larry Ward, who will present and discuss examples of his T-shirt designs. He will then take attendees through the design process so that they can create their own T-shirt designs.

Attendees are required to bring their own laptop computers capable of wirelessly connecting to the Internet.

Pre-meeting download directions:

- Participants should download the GIMP software package and the ImageMagick software package from the Internet to their computer in advance. Larry will walk everyone through the installation instructions.
- Visit <https://www.gimp.org/downloads> to find the downloads of the GIMP distribution for Windows, macOS, and Linux.
- Visit <https://imagemagick.org/script/download.php> to find the downloads of the ImageMagick distribution for Windows, macOS, and Linux.
- You won't be able to use an iPad, Android tablet, or a Chromebook for this event.

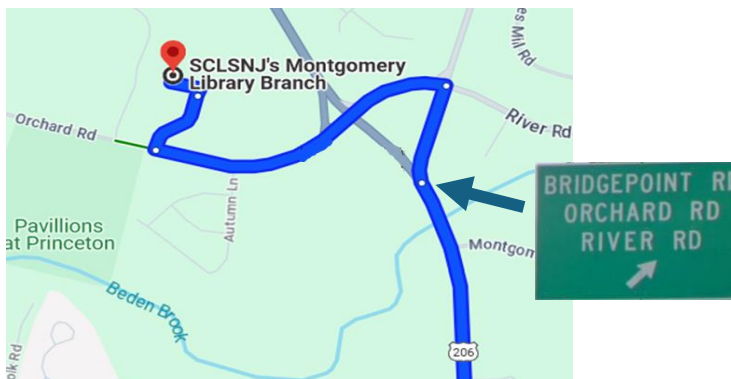

Larry Ward is a software engineer who grew up in Southern NJ. His undergraduate degree is in Electrical Engineering from MIT, and he also holds a Masters in EE from Georgia Tech. An avid artist, he started working with AI-generated images in May 2023.

This is a family-friendly event, but minors [age 12 and older] must be accompanied by a responsible adult to ensure that they will be well-behaved (i.e. totally quiet during the lecture). No pre-registration is needed.
